Jennifer

and

Michael's

Anniversary

As they celebrate 12 years of marriage,

this book is presented to

Jennifer Lamont

and

Michael Lamont

It was more than 12 years ago that Jennifer and Michael first met. At that time, they had no way of knowing what the future had in store for them. In the years to come, there would be laughter and tears, triumphs and trials, successes and failures, and joys and sorrows. But in those early days as they learned to love and respect one another, little did they know that this was the start of something special!

Time passed and that love and respect deepened. Then, on August 12, 2000, Jennifer and Michael were married at St. Peter's Cathedral, London, Ontario.

Many memories of that wedding day are still vivid: the special people who were present for the occasion; the last minute details that still needed attention; the plans that didn't quite happen as planned! But of all the memories of that day, the most important are those of the ceremony itself, when Jennifer and Michael stood together, exchanged their solemn vows, and were pronounced husband and wife.

Their marriage began with a honeymoon in Paris. This was a time to privately share their hopes and dreams for the future. From the moment they moved into their first home, at 258 Walker Avenue, London, Ontario, they shared, as husband and wife, in all that life had to offer. And, to this day, there are times when fond memories of that first home come to mind.

As they knew it would, life brought many changes for Jennifer and Michael: many challenges, many unexpected turns in the road. But nothing altered everything quite as much as the arrival of Julia, Lewis and Marlissa! Through many special experiences that only parents understand, Jennifer and Michael found their love for one another growing deep and strong. And now they are grandparents to Michelle, Ashley and Liam!

Season followed season and year followed year. It's the good times, the joyful times, the times of laughter and fun that they like to remember. And for Jennifer and Michael, there were many of those. But it's the difficulties that have tested and proven the strength and depth of Jennifer and Michael's love.

Now, August 12, 2012, Jennifer and Michael are celebrating 12 years of marriage, another milestone in their journey together. A wedding anniversary is a time for celebration. There is much to rejoice in. There is much to be thankful for. There are many fond memories to treasure. But a wedding anniversary is a time for reflection as well. It is a time to remember that a marriage is built on love and trust, and that, without these qualities, it cannot endure.

On this special anniversary, Jennifer and Michael were pleased to have friends and family celebrate the day with them. Some would come to visit; others would call. Still others would be there in thought alone. There were many who made this day extra special.

Happy Anniversary to the best parents in the world.

Julia, Lewis and Marlissa
